

STATE PROMOTED HOMELESSNESS

Prisoners serving time in California prison's make up a large part of the prison work force, serving years even decades work for slave wages, 10 cents up to 80 cents per hour, working in culinary, doing janitorial, jobs working in the library etc.

Upon release either by having served their time or by parole they are let out with $200. gate money and if they need clothes for the release money is deducted from the gate money. They hit the streets with $200. or less, needing shelter, food, clothing and if they do not have support from family or friends they will last 2 maybe 3 day's leaving only two options live on the streets or steal to survive maybe both. It takes weeks to get any state aid SSI, food stamps if they can qualify.

Around 9,000 prisoners are released each year in California with a large majority having no resources, adding to the homeless crisis year after year a lot of them return to prison adding to the recidivism, I understand it is around 70% that wind up back in prison..

With a blind eye from C.D.C.R. and almost every government agency involved it's no wonder California has one of the largest homeless and recidivism rate in the nation.

The elected officials tell how they will fix the problem, they say just give us more money. Somehow when they get more money it seems to wind up on some other project.

Prisons are one of California's biggest money producers for the state, union jobs, prison industries, lawyers, judges, public defenders, district attorneys etc. etc,.. why would the state want to release inmates to make it on the outside.

They say that justice is blind

I say that justice is not blind its only colored blind and only see's the color
